Report on Basic Food Adulteration Demonstration at ICAEHS School

The Department of Food Technology conducted a Basic Food Adulteration Demonstration at ICA EHS School on 21/11/2025 the programme carried out by students of food technology department under guidance of faculty members .

Objective of the Programme

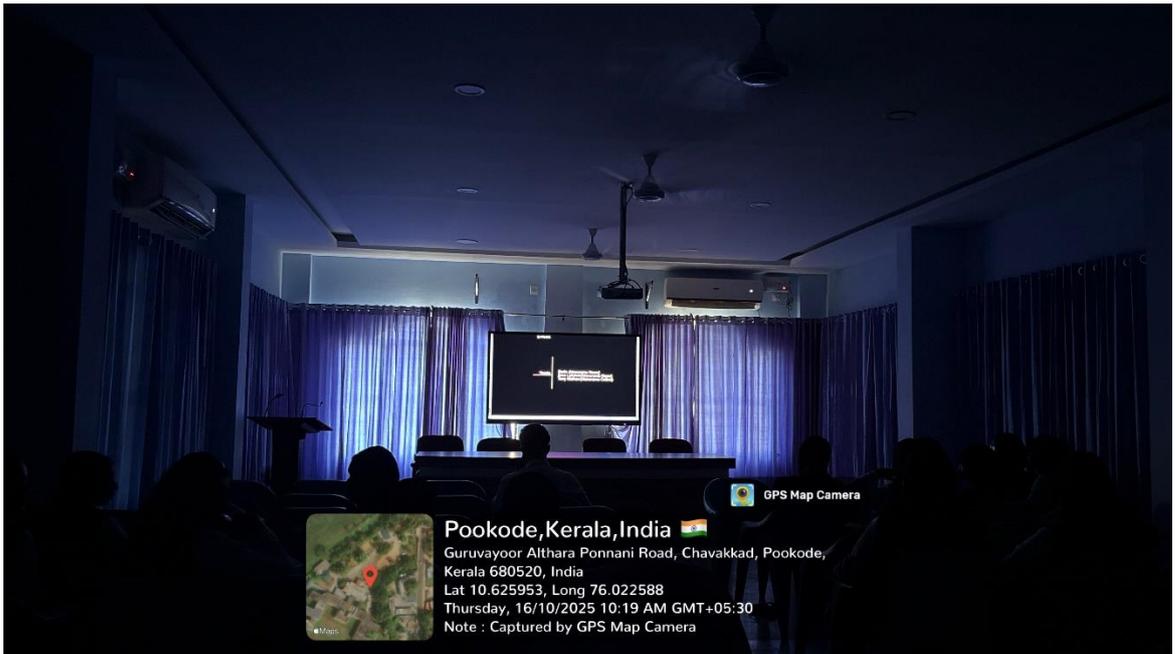

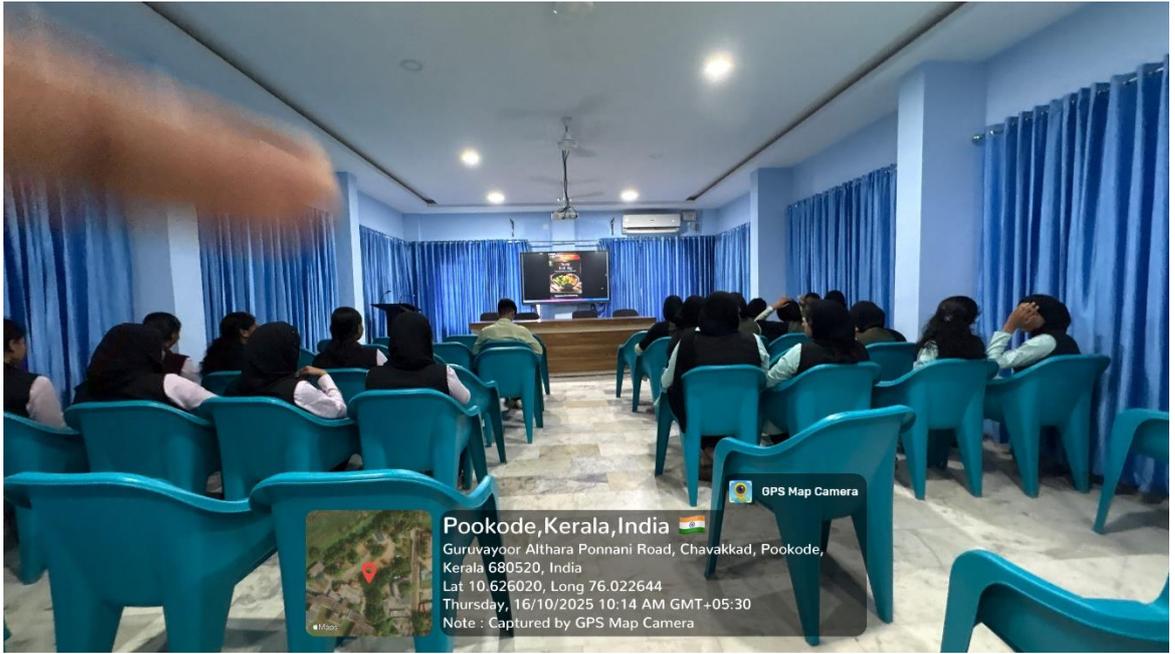

- To create awareness among school students about food adulteration and its harmful effects on health.
- To educate students on identifying common food adulterants using simple and safe household tests.
- To promote knowledge of food safety and consumer rights at an early age.
- To encourage healthy food habits and informed consumer practices among students.
- To foster social responsibility and community awareness through extension activities.

During the programme, faculty members and students demonstrated basic household tests to identify adulteration in commonly used food items such as milk, turmeric powder, chilli powder, sugar. The importance of consuming safe and unadulterated food was clearly explained.

The demonstration was interactive and well received by the school students. The programme successfully enhanced awareness on food safety and consumer responsibility.
